MRS. HENRY CLEWS MPRESSED ABROAD BY SCENES OF WAR

Peels Prejudice, She Says. Because of Treatment of English.

Mrs. Henry Clews, who was passenger on the Lusitania arriving to-day, came home with strong anti-German prejudices, which she said she did not have before the war. Her resentment was aroused by the treatment of English and French both men and women, who were

"A mob of three thousand people gathered about the Hotel Savoy in Carlebad," she said, "for two evenings after Great Britain entered the war., They howled like wolves for a chance to attack English or French guesta, whether men or women. The nuthorities made no effort to protect foreigners on the streets, though they did not allow the hotel itself to be attacked. While I found I could be stracked. While I found I could scape insult by wearing an Amerions Sag, it was intensaly irritating to watch the ill treatment of men and women no more giulty of ill will to Germany or dangerous than I was. "At Munich, where I stayed for s week, the American Consul advised me to leave as soon as possible to avoid misunderstanding. My finger prints were taken and I had to report every day, but that seemed to be a proper pregaution for them to take regarding strangers. I was assisted to the termination of the regular tactics of the German army afficer that it was part of the regular tactics of the German army to use civilian prisoners and prisoners of war as a sorean against an attaching force. I told him I came from a country where such actions were regarded as worthy only of the Hun, but he laughed and said I could not understand that in this war every German life was precious and must be conserved without regard to sentiment, tradition or the civil rights of other nationalities.

"By way of contract, I found the Rits in London owned by a German served by German waijors who ware not molested in any way in earning their living or going about the hotsl or the streets."

Overcoatings That Caused a Strike

Some time the middle of June a manufacturer came to me with a story, in effect, the fol-lowing: "For twentyfive years I have been making clothing for one of New York's highest priced ready-made clothiers, who sold overgoats at prices averaging way beyond $30.00. They are at present quiet and my shop is idle. If it were possible for you to give me a few thousand overcoats I will guarantee to give same labor i pui in the aforesaid garments at about one-third of what they used to pay

This sent me on a scout through the town, for some overcoatings off price, and J was fortunate to secure a great range of Black Kerseys, Plaid Back all woot coatings, fine Blue Chinchillas. I called in all the extra cutters I could get and we made these, garments up at that time.

After these goods were shipped to New York, the managers of the ception to my shipping goods out of town and called a strike on my establishment, which lasted ten weeks. My strike is now over. Overcoats are in my stock. Custom made, ready to wear out, these garments, hand needled in one of the finest shops in the world, may well be considered as classical examples of sartorial art. No tailor or ready-made clothier in this city could build equal garments at anywhere near the price which I will charge you for these all ready to wear.

Black Kerseys, all wool, 24 to 28 oz. to the yard, color absolutely guaranteed, all ready to wear.

Blue Chinchillas, ready to wear all wool fabric, guaranteed for color.
